The two year journey at Xavier School of Sustainability was full of learning and memories at every step. The course of MBA-SM gives a window to the corporate world, with its rigorous course structure which taught me not only about the wider perspectives of Sustainability but also the soft skills like how to manage my own self right from dressing to being on time. It gives a good foundation and a platform to develop our intellect and shape our ideas and thoughts towards how to make the dream of a sustainable world possible. In my 2-month internship I got a first hand experience of what is sustainability in a manufacturing industry and how the businesses look at it in India. This hands-on experience combined with the knowledge base that the course gave me proved to be very useful when it came to final placements as I was able to be prompt and clear in what I speak. Whether it was a committee work, classroom presentations, case study competitions, group assignments everything was intertwined with how to implement the classroom learnings in a practical day-to-day life, on a priority which demands good quality of performance without any compromise. The best thing about the course was embedding the value of thinking in an untraditional way to achieve an exceptional goal of saving the world using sustainability.
